Report on

Orientation session for students on "How teachers will conduct assessments and evaluations"

A 1- Day Program was organised by the IQAC at Vignan's Institute of Engineering For Women, Visakhapatnam on 21st December, 2020.

Teacher evaluation can be an opportunity for genuine professional learning. When organized around clearly established and accepted standards of practice, teacher evaluation offers an opportunity for educators to reflect seriously on their practice, and promote learning. A curriculum director and administrator, believes that teacher evaluation should be student-focused or linked to classroom performance rather than solely observing the teacher. Evaluations help teachers:

- Align their goals with the school's vision and mission
- Engage in professional learning programs.
- Upgrade skills along with educational improvements.
- Monitor the students' learning more effectively.
- Reflect or do self-evaluations

Program Team:

Resource Person: Prof. V. Ram Babu, Department of Mechanical Engineering,
GMR Institute of Technology, Rajam.

Patron: Dr J. Sudhakar, Principal

Convener: Dr Akansha Mishra, Co-ordinator, IQAC

Number of Participants: 56 Members (16- Faculty, 40- Students)

Resource Person Overview:

In teacher education and the professional development of teachers, assessment is increasingly being recognized as a valuable tool to promote development and growth in the profession, that is, not only as a means to certification and qualification but also as a tool for learning. First, the nature of formative assessment is circumscribed; it essentially means providing informative feedback to the learner and its prime function is to deliver insight into improvements in performance. Second, formative assessment in teaching is delineated as a process of compiling performance evidence, appraising the collected information, and, subsequently, providing feedback in such a way that teaching practice(s) can be improved. It is informative nature of assessment that makes it valuable to professional growth. Third, it is clarified how different assessment tools or interventions may help the (student)teachers as learners to benefit from assessment which depends to a large extent on the (1) nature of feedback given and (2) the assessment arrangement (i.e., tools and approaches).

Engineering for Women

About the Program:

The success of learning is a product of a collaborative effort. All teacher leaders should be actively involved in the process of improving teaching practices. Conduct training and discuss the importance of doing teacher evaluation. By doing this, you will gain the teachers' buy in and they will understand that evaluations are performed to help them and not to criticize them.

An effective teacher evaluator should be able to see how students are learning and not just look at what the teacher is doing. Take note of how students interact with the teacher during recitations and group discussions. Is it an active and fun learning atmosphere? How do students react? Do they get passing scores during assessments? Ideally, conduct formal and informal observations to assess if the teacher is student-centred in teaching.

A good evaluator is a great mentor. Provide the teacher your rating and raise some points you would like to discuss. Be honest by telling them their level of proficiency. New teachers who may have limited teaching experience may need more guidance. As a mentor, you can help them understand their challenges and give some tips on how to overcome those challenges. Focus on areas where the teacher could do better. Encourage them to perform student surveys to determine where in the curriculum their students are struggling. Share your best practices by developing strategies for good classroom instructions.

Teacher was able to do the following (Teacher Strengths):

- Create an environment conducive to learning.
- Facilitate learning through student-centred approach.
- Use enrichment activities for students to further understand the topic.
- Encourage open discussions, relating the topic to real life situation.
- Use questioning and probing techniques to engage students intellectually.
- Administer assessments effectively and in a reasonable amount of time

Schedule of Activities:

Day and Date: 21st December, 2020

Venue: Online Mode

Objectives of Program:

- Measuring improvement over time.
- Motivating students to study.
- Evaluating the teaching methods and ranking the student capabilities in relation.

To
The Principal
VIEW
Visakhapatnam

Respected Sir,

Sub: Approval to conduct Faculty orientation Program on "Student-Centred Pedagogy Methods" organised by IQAC at VIEW-reg.

In accordance with the counsel made by the committee in the GBM, the committee is here to solicit to organize an event for the students and faculty members of our institution to emphasize their skills.

In contemplation to conduct this programme, the scheme is to deliver the objective of the "Student-Centred Pedagogy Methods" to students and faculty. On this account kindly provide guidance and support to conduct this programme during 12th April 2021.

Thanking You Sir.

Yours Faithfully,

Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC)

Report on

Faculty Orientation Program on "Student-Centred Pedagogy Methods"

A 1- Day Program was organised by the IQAC at Vignan's Institute of Engineering For Women, Visakhapatnam on 12th April 2021.

The Program Outcomes are evolved through a process of discussion and deliberations chiefly coordinated by the department academic committee comprising of the Head of Department and 2 senior members of the department faculty involving discussions/inputs with/from the following representation groups and in the spirit of larger objectives of under graduate programs in engineering as laid out by AICTE, State Higher education council, Affiliating University (JNTUK) and also from the programme specific criteria and Graduate attributes published by international professional bodies.

Program Team:

Resource Person: Dr. B. Prajna

Head of the Department, Prof. CSE, AU, Vizag

Patron: Dr J. Sudhakar, Principal

Convener: Dr Akansha Mishra, Co-ordinator, IQAC

Number of Participants: 48 Members(25- Faculty, 23-Students)

Resource Person Overview:

Addressing the different learning needs and diversity of students, a student-centric teaching-learning process is adopted by the faculty using ICT-based teaching learning strategies. Defining a clear course outcomes and schedule; the institute also initiated certificate and value-added courses for desirous students. The institution is equipped with modernized pedagogy and excellent infrastructure, which is upgraded periodically. We are leading on co-curricular and extra-curricular fronts, industrial visits, training workshops and projects for multidimensional growth of the students. Spacious well-equipped labs, AV-fitted smart classrooms, 24-h WiFi, computer facilities, pilot-plant, e-studio and informatively decorated corridors encompass the progressive and environment-friendly campus. The library houses over 12,500 books from a wide range of subjects including international journals and magazines. Students receive hands-on expertise on sophisticated instruments like HPLC, FTIR-spectrophotometer, motorized stereotaxic instrument, operant-conditioning apparatus and ELISA reader.

About the Program:

The recent transition from faculty centric learning to student centric learning has paved a path for the institutions to self-assess and derive their own assessment methodologies for improving the quality of education which in-turn shall produce quality students for the betterment of the society. The universities and the engineering institutions have to follow certain guidelines specified by AICTE as well as discipline-specific accrediting bodies like ACM, IEEE, CSAB, and others, to design curriculum. In addition, department recognizes the need for accountability to all of its stakeholders: students, faculty, staff, administration, parents, alumni, employers. Assessment data provides evidence to all of these groups that department is scrupulously monitoring its progress towards its goals.

Assessment is a teaching and management tool, designed to provide departments and units with quality information on which to improve learning and base organizational decisions. It is a process of defining a program or unit's mission, developing desired outcomes, continuously monitoring progress towards those outcomes, communicating results, and using those results to make improvements. Assessment is founded on a set of overall institutional outcomes, drawn from the institution's mission. Program level learning outcomes are developed from these outcomes; course level learning outcomes are developed from program outcomes; and lesson level outcomes arise from the outcomes of the course. All are designed to achieve the institute's set outcomes.

The results of outcomes assessment from courses and programs provide empirical data for departments to develop their own annual and long-range plans. At the institutional level, this information, as well as information from assessment of institutional outcomes, is analyzed and coordinated within the scope of the institution's mission and its projected resources and priorities to develop its recommendations for resource allocation and longrange planning.

Schedule of Activities:

Day and Date: 12th April, 2021

Venue: Online Mode

Objectives of Program:

- Defining the Vision & mission and identify the Educational objectives of the program.
- Identifying the most important learning outcomes of the program in correlation to the Graduate Attributes.
- Ensure that students have adequate opportunities to achieve the set outcomes.
- Defining the process to assess progress towards the set outcomes.
- Develop the assessment plan and carry out the assessment.
- Collect, analyze, communicate, and report on the findings.
